

Equitable Resilience Fund

Monthly Report – February 2019

Comments from your Chief Investment Officer

The last day of February marked the third anniversary of the launch of your fund and also the end of another strong month for equity markets. When we launched the fund three years ago, we said it was reasonable to expect our investment strategy to deliver a return of approximately 9% per year, on average, over the long run. We are pleased to report that the returns in the first three years have been a little better than this. Looking into the future we are, if anything, more optimistic than we were three years ago. The pace of innovation remains strong, perhaps even accelerating, and the expansion of global middle class continues apace, all of which should help drive strong economic growth over the coming years and decades. In addition, a resolution to the US-Chinese trade conflict looks to be in sight which should further improve market confidence.

We have made a few minor changes to your portfolio in February, trimming some of the larger positions to make room for a few new investments. You now hold small investments in Edwards Life Sciences, The Cooper Companies and Thermo Fisher Scientific.
